November 13, 2008

Congratulations to Neill Myers who was selected as the 2008 Young Careerist during the Business and Professional Women River City's Young Careerist competition. This annual competition is designed to expose young up-and-coming professional women to a broader network of successful women in the business community. Participants in the competition are required to submit a written biographical essay and legislative platform; participate in individual and group interviews and deliver a four-minute speech on a selected topic.

Neill is in her third year of the Health Insurance Professional Program (HIPP) and currently serves in the corporate public policy team as a health policy manager. Prior to joining WellPoint, she served as director of business development and social change, for America Learns, an organization focused on improving youth literacy.

In addition to Neill's award, Candace Allen, was selected as first runner-up during the competition. Candace serves as a market advocate for Anthem Blue Cross and Blue Shield in Kentucky in the operations area and is an alumnus of WellPoint's Health Insurance Professional Program (HIPP).

Congratulations to both women on their achievement!
